Some REFLECTIONS upon PEACE and WAR, with Regard to the late Conduct of the Adminiſtration.

To the AUTHOR of the WEEKLY REGISTER.

SIR,

THE Craftſmen, and their Adherents, have taken abundance of Pains to prove the Neceſſity of a War, and have done their Endeavours to kindle it both abroad, and at home: They, or at leaſt ſome of them, who made the loudeſt Outcries againſt the late War in Flanders, and put a Stop to the moſt glorious Series of Victories, that ever did Honour to any Period of Hiſtory, they have addreſs'd themſelves to the Paſſions of the People anew, and labour'd to light the Torch of Diſcord again, that they might find their own Advantage, in the general Confuſion.——But, Thanks to the great Care and Tenderneſs of the preſent Adminiſtration, they have been hitherto diſappointed, and the World continues in Peace; they only are uneaſy in the general Tranquility, and their Uneaſineſs is owing to the Tranquility they could not deſtroy. I can't ſuppoſe thoſe Gentlemen intirely ignorant of the firſt Principles of Government, but, ſince they are engag'd in a weekly Abuſe of their Knowledge, it may'n't be amiſs to preſent the Publick with ſome Thoughts upon War and Peace, by Way of Antidote to their pernicious Doctrines. The Buſineſs of Government may be properly divided into two great and general Branches, Foreign and Domeſtic; and theſe again are ſubdivided into Civil and Eccleſiaſtic, War and Peace; the firſt is to ſecure the Quiet and Property, Freedoms and Privileges of the Subject at Home; the ſecond is to preſerve them againſt Dangers from Abroad, to balance, and direct the Intereſts of the neighbouring Princes, and keep the Scales of Power even.——For the preſent I ſhall confine myſelf to the laſt only, which is executed by War or Peace.——Peace is the natural State of Mankind, the favourite Point which all moral Stateſmen have in View, and the Method which beſt ſecures the Territories, the Rights and Honours of Nations; it breathes the Dictate of Reaſon, and ſettles or prevents, by Reaſon, whatever Intricacies the neceſſary Revolutions of Time bring into Debate; it reconciles and unites one Community to another, and makes the Inhabitants of the Globe Countrymen and Fellow-Citizens: It wears away, and annihilates the national Prejudices which national Injuries leave upon the Mind, and, inſtead of mutual Enmity and Hatred, inſpires mutual Friendſhip and Benevolence.——Suppoſe unavoidable Accidents, or turbulent and malicious Spirits, ſhould bring a Point into Queſtion, which irritates the Minds of Men, and ſows the Seeds of Animoſity between Kingdom and Kingdom, Peace allows a Pauſe for the Plea of Equity to be heard, and with-holds the deſtroying Angel from letting looſe Ruin among Mankind: 'Twas the Voice of GOD himſelf when he created the Univerſe which we inhabit, and the Salutation of Heaven, when the Meſſiah was born.——'Tis Honour to preſerve it while 'tis to be preſerv'd, and Infamy to forfeit it till inevitable Neceſſity diſſolves the amicable Union.——Let the Enemies of Britain abroad firſt blaſt themſelves with the Change, and let her Enemies at home be the firſt to recommend it; the true Friends of their Country will always be pleas'd to ſee its Peace preſerv'd inviolably, and will bleſs the Adminiſtration that keeps the Guilt of War at Diſtance from their Shores: They are thoroughly ſenſible that what is gain'd by Negotiation, is gain'd with Innocence, and will be eaſily ſecur'd; but what is ſeiz'd by the Violence of Arms, muſt be defended by Violence, and intails Confuſion on the Poſſeſſors: They are perfectly convinc'd, that as Commerce and Navigation are the Parents of Affluence and Plenty, they can only flouriſh in Peace and Tranquility——The Genius of Britain, from its rudeſt Cliff, ſmiles upon the Ocean, when ſhe ſees her Navies crowding to their Ports, with Peace for their Pilot and Preſerver; but turns away her Eyes with Horror, when they become the Prey of the Enemy, and the Toil of the Merchant is ſwallow'd up in the Rapaciouſneſs of War.

War is the laſt Reſource of Policy, and ought never to be put in Practice, till the utmoſt Extremity of Injury makes it a Deed of Prudence and Honour; all wiſe and humane Miniſters have made it their Study to avoid it as long as poſſible; they knew 'twas frequently made the Tool of Ambition, ſeldom the Means of Juſtice, always the Inſtrument of Calamity and Diſtreſs; they knew the Misfortunes which attended it were generally ſuperior to thoſe it was to remedy, they could not depend upon it even for that Remedy; and, if it fail'd, they were ſure the Publick would ſuffer additional Malidies. Is a Government poor and incumber'd with Debts? War is expenſive and doubles the Load. Is it hurt in its Commerce, or deceiv'd by its Allies? War, with ill Fortune, makes Redreſs ſtill more precarious, and Alliances more unfaithful and vain.——The deciding national Quarrels by a War, is like ending an Argument with a Duel, and leaving the Knot of Truth to be cut aſunder by the Sword.——This is truſting the Event of Things wholly to Chance, and tacitly owning the Difficulties in Diſpute too great for our Capacities to remove: Now would a wiſe Man make Chance his Arbitreſs, or truſt any Thing to her Deciſion that properly belong'd to his own? No certainly, he would ſcorn her Interpoſition, and refuſe her Aid; he would be guided wholly by Reaſon, and make it his Glory to ſurmount, by Wiſdom, whatever Obſtacles Chance had thrown in his Way.——Chance is only the Deity of Fools; and he who voluntarily blows up the Flames of War, is the firſt of her Votaries.——I have often wonder'd how it came to be the univerſal Cuſtom of Mankind to adjuſt their Differences by the Force of Arms: I am not ſurpriz'd indeed, that a Tyrant's Ambition or Cruelty ſhould make a Prey of his Fellow-Creatures, or that a Mad-Man ſhould make the Miſeries of War his Sport.——But, when Men of Sagacity and Reaſon gravely determine on mutual and general Deſtruction, in Compliment to ſome imaginary Point of Intereſt and Honour, I ſtand amaz'd at their Conduct, and conclude that Providence has infatuated their Judgments, in Reſentment to Mankind.——Let us preſent before our Eyes the Image of two mighty Fleets, or numerous Armies, ready to plunge into all the Horrors of a Battle. Let us ſuppoſe ourſelves the Inhabitants of ſome other Planet, and wholly Strangers to this, and what ſhould we think of ſo terrible a Proſpect? Could we believe the contending Parties were of the ſame Species of Creatues, that their Maxims, Morals, Intereſts, and Paſſions were generally the ſame; that the Matter in Debate was a Trifle in Compariſon to the Conſequence; that they had no particular Enmity to each other, that they were alike innocent with Regard to the Cauſe of their Animoſities; that they were educated to Deſtruction, and receiv'd Pay for being inſtrumental to each other's Ruin? Could we believe to dire a Circumſtance, till fatal Experience convinc'd us it was true, and the horrible Execution that follow'd, aſtonith'd us with Demonſtration? What Sentiments ſhould we feel in beholding the Scene of Battle, and the Variety of monſtrous Miſchiefs that ſurrounded it, the Ingenuity that Men had Inviſh'd to confound each other, and the Eagerneſs, the Barbarity, and the Fury, that ſpirited the Luſt of Slaughter! What Sentiments ſhould we feel in beholding the Miſery of the Vanquiſh'd, and the Triumph of the Victor! How ſhould we lament the one, and deſpiſe the other! How ſhould we condemn that Soul of Miſchief, who, void of Tenderneſs and Remorſe, proclaim'd War with Humanity, and commiſſion'd the Sword to deſtroy his Fellow-Creatures! How dreadful muſt that Man's Reflections be in the laſt Moments of his Exiſtence, when impartial Recollection ſhould preſent him with a Review of his Crimes, and the untimely dying Agonies of Thouſands he had maſſacred, ſhould be ſtrongly imag'd before him to aggravate his own? How hideous his Apprehenſion of their future Upbraidings, and the abſolute Deſpair that diſmiſs'd him, ſelf-condemn'd, from his Fears, to its Puniſhment!

A ſecond Letter from HELI, the Turkiſh Traveller, to the SANTON, MULEY ABDALLAH; on the Spleen.

HOLY and Reverend Derviſe! ſole Pattern of Equanimity, and Sum of humane Perfection! wilt thou again indulge me in revealing my Anguiſh, and pouring out my Complainings before thee? I fly to thy Wiſdom for Relief, as to a Part of the ſupream ALLA, as a Genius from Paradiſe, whoſe only Buſineſs among us is to hear our Misfortunes with Pity, and learn us to bear them with Patience; to ſet us an Example of Purity and Holineſs, and point out the Paths of Knowledge and Virtue.——When I preſume to lift up my Eyes to the incomprehenſible and eternal firſt Cauſe, I eſteem myſelf too contemptible for his Regard, and too frail to deſerve his Favour.——But when I apply to thee for Advice, or Comfort, I expect thy Humanity will temper the Severity of thy Wiſdom, and the Sublimity of thy Character atone for the Imperfections of mine.——I expect to find in thee, the good Angel allotted for ſuch tender Offices of Friendſhip and Beneficence, the Mirror on which the Face of God is reflected mild and merciful, acceſſible and forgiving.——Behold me then, moſt venerable Santon! abſorb'd in the profoundeſt Melancholy, and almoſt reduc'd to the Verge of Deſpair; the Proſpect of Life is to me cover'd over with impenetrable Darkneſs, and threaten'd with continual Storms; the little Periods of Pleaſure, and Intervals of Sun-ſhine, are in one Moment vaniſh'd away, and my Soul, like the Dove at the general Deluge, wanders about in Search of Repoſe in vain.——In vain have I endeavour'd to clear up the Landſcape, and change the Scene of Things; I have perſued Imagination thro' all its Reſources, try'd every Art and Stratagem to cheat myſelf into Tranquility to no Purpoſe; even Philoſophy fails me, and I remain in perfect Deſpondency, abhorring the World, deſpiſing my Fellow-Creatures, and weary of my own Exiſtence.——Life appears to me like a bad Diamond in the Hands of a Lapidary; I turn it every Way, change its Form, ſhew it in every Light, and yet its Defects are too notorious to be hid, and the Succeſs mocks my Labour.——If I complain of my unhappy Condition to the moſt Underſtanding among the Followers of Jeſus, inſtead of affording me their Compaſſion, they eſteem my Pains imaginary, and ſmile at the moſt exquiſite Tortures I feel.——They call my Misfortune the Spleen, and affect to rally me out of a Diſeaſe they cannot cure; their Remedy is drinking Wine to Exceſs, and one Midneſs, according to their own Notions, is cur'd by another.——But far be the deteſtable Medicine from the Muſſulman's ſober Lip, neither let the Elect of God defile themſelves with voluntary Phrenzy.——If my preſent Calamity is the Diſeaſe of my Conſtitution, let my Patience ſupport it; but never let my Virtue ſuffer in ſtriving to avoid it by ſuch unwarrantable Means.——Divine Solitary! judge of the Diſtreſs of my Soul, and afford me thy Advice to cure it! ſuppoſe 'tis all imaginary, 'tis nevertheleſs a Pain, and, as much worthy of thy Benevolence to remove: Dreams of Horror, while they continue, are equal in Torment to Realities, and he, who wakens me from ſo dire a Slumber, is proportionably as much my Friend as he who, waking, ſaves me from a Precipice.——Thou art verſ'd in the Frailties of humane Nature, thy Underſtanding and Experience are the Phyſicians of the Mind, and thy Compaſſion will exert both in Favour of thy Fellow Creatures.——Afford me then a Tranſcript of thy holy Ideas, make me acquainted with the Words of Peace, and reaſon me into the Quiet I have loſt.——O that my Soul had conquer'd all her turbulent and uneaſy Paſſions, like thine, and had made itſelf as indifferent to all ſublunary Enjoyments; ſo might I ſecurely take my Leave of the Vanities I deſpis'd; and, in the Serenities of refin'd Solitude, diſcover the Happineſs I had been ſo ſeverely diſappointed of before: Where I might converſe with my own Mind without Interruption, reform its Errors, and improve its Virtues.——This is the higheſt Flight of my Ambition, and what I moſt deſpair of attaining; I am out of Love with the World, 'tis true, but then I am not reconcil'd to myſelf: My Diſpleaſure is founded on too bad Principles to afford me any Satisfaction, and, if I condemn the Amuſements of Life in general, perhaps 'tis only becauſe they are not all in my Reach; were I exalted to Stations of Eminence and Power, my Pride gratified, and my Luxury indulg'd, 'tis probable I ſhould think favourably of the Being that bleſs'd me with ſuch Variety of Enjoyment.——On the other Hand, were I now ſequeſter'd from the Sons of Men, and obſcur'd in the moſt inchanting Solitude, 'tis full as probable I ſhould grow weary of my Retreat, that I ſhould eſteem the Return of the Seaſons, the Charms of a rural Landſcape, and all the Delights of Nature as taſteleſs and inſipid; that I ſhould long for the Relief of Society, the Hurry of Grandeur, and all the vain Amuſements I had been tir'd of before.——Sage Abdallah! how much are we the Sport of our own Paſſions! and how little do we know what is neceſſary to our own Happineſs! We deſpiſe the brute Creation tho' their Appetites are only equal to their Wants, while we ourſelves incumber Nature with a falſe Delicacy, and create the Evils we complain of.——Will thy Wiſdom condeſcend to redeem me from this Labyrinth of Error, this Round of Uncertainty? Wilt thou teach me to accord to the Laws of Providence, and ſuffer the Changes of Fortune with Indifference? Wilt thou guide me in the moderate Enjoyment of thoſe Bleſſings which our holy Prophet has ſo liberally allow'd to the Faithful? Wilt thou correct the natural Gloom of my Diſpoſition, and make it inſtrumental to Knowledge and Virtue?——Wilt thou learn me the Myſteries of pleaſing Malabcholy, and make the Hours of Penſiveneſs delightful? Thy Sanctity, and thy Innocence have made thy moſt ſerious Intervals like thoſe of Heaven, full of Beatitude and Harmony, and thy Contemplations, like the Angels, unmix'd with Sorrow or Repentance; thou only, among the Children of Mortality, art intimate with Happineſs, and can'ſt beſt communicate it to others.——Venerable Santon! I reverence thee moſt profoundly, with my Head turn'd towards the Eaſt, and perform the Ablution with the ſtricteſt Solemnity, that my Letter may be freer from Pollution, and more worthy of approaching thy Holineſs.——I recommend thee to thy good Genius, leſt the Dæmon of Spleen, which haunts me, ſhould render my Correſpondence contagious, and elude thy Prudence, by making the Misfortune of thy Friend the Means of troubling thy Repoſe.

The Bacchus, Capt. Stevens, which is arriv'd at Briſtol from Jamaica, was taken the 27th of April by a Spaniſh Guarda Coſta, of eight Carriage Guns and 10 Swivels, between the Havana and the Gulph, which fired a Gun at her, and ſhe return'd; upon which they hoiſted a Red Flag, with Death's Head in the Middle, when the Bacchus ſtruck, and her Boat went on board the Spaniard, who told them, that if they had fired another Gun, they ſhould have had no Quarter. They plundered her of all they liked, and ſtript the Captain and People of their Cloaths, Linnen, &c. and threatned them with immediate Death if they did not diſcover where their Money lay, and had Ropes rieved at the Yard Arm ready. They opened all the Letters in the Captain's Cuſtody, and ſearched very ſtrictly. The Runlet Sloop, Capt. Brin, of Rhode Iſland, was taken in Company with the Bacchus: They treated her Men very barbarouſly, putting their Fingers between Gun-lock Skrews, till they flatten'd them, and ſome had lighted Matches between, in order to extort a Confeſſion where their Money lay, of which they had none on board. They likewiſe plundered the Sloop, and ſtript the Captain and Men of all their Cloaths and Inſtruments. Theſe Rogues reported, that the Day before they took the Humber Sloop of Rhode Iſland, Captain Rogers, they left one of their Men on board the ſaid Sloop, drunk, and Captain Rogers had Orders to keep them Company that Night; but a Gale ſpringing up, the Captain truſted to his Sloop's ſailing, and ſheered off, notwithſtanding the Pyrate fired eight or ten Guns, to make him bring to. About eight Days before they took the Recovery of London, Capt. Wheatle, and plundered her of a large Sum of Money. The Bacchus was the eighth Prize they had taken in 20 Days after coming out of Porco Rico. A Mulatto on board, of ſome Diſtinction among them, made ſeveral Offers to ſhoot the Captain of the Runlet, and the Mate of the Bacchus; but the Commander of the Pyrate, who behav'd himſelf the moſt civil among them, prevented him (his Name Don Juan Delabarca Mondonda Elabarca, and the Sloop the San Franciſco Xavier.) They had three Linguiſts to examine Prizes, and his Crew conſiſted of 70 Men, Spaniſh, French, Iriſh, Engliſh, &c. beſides Officers. They gave out that they had ſeveral Concerts. While the Bacchus and Runlet were plundering, two Sail appeared in Sight; ſo they were diſmiſſed, after ſix Hours Detention, and the Pyrates made the beſt of their Way to ſpeak with the others.

WEDNESDAY, June 16.

Yeſterday being the Anniverſary of his Majeſty's Proclamation, the Court was very numerous on that Occaſion at Hampton-Court, and their Majeſties receiv'd the Compliments thereupon from the Nobility, Foreign Miniſters, &c.

A Royal Proclamation is iſſued, forbidding all his Majeſty's Subjects to give or furniſh Aſſiſtance to any of the Inhabitants of Corſica, now in Rebellion againſt the Republick of Genoa.

A Court Martial was held Yeſterday for the ſecond Regiment of Foot Guards, when ſeveral Priſoners were try'd for ſeveral Miſdemeanours; two of them were order'd to be whipt upon the Parade in St. James's-Park, for Neglect of Duty, and others were diſcharg'd.

The ſame Day Edward Le Neve, Eſq; Water-Bailiff of the City of London, held a Court of Conſervation on the River Thames at Stains.

The Barges that belong to Abington, Reading, and Oxford, cannot come down the River Thames by Reaſon of its Shallowneſs, being in ſeveral Places quite dry; and the Barges that generally came from Ware in leſs than two Days, are now above a Fortnight, being oblig'd to wait for the Flaſhes.

Yeſterday the Commiſſioners of the new Sewer leading from Scotland Yard to St. James's Gate by Cleaveland Court, ſurveyed the ſame, and order'd ſeveral Places to be open'd; ſome of the Inhabitants complaining it did not effectually carry off their Water as propoſed, and therefore they refuſed to pay towards the ſame.

Preſs-Warrants are iſſued out by the Lords Commiſſioners of the Admiralty, and Yeſterday Morning they began to preſs Men from on board ſome homeward bound Ships about the Hope and Graveſend, to man out his Majeſty's Ships of War lately put in Commiſſion.

Robberies, &c. Shipping. The Rebecca, Robert Jenkins Maſter, ſailed from Jamaica, with a Lading of Sugar, &c. for London; but on the 9th of April laſt, being becalmed and near the Havanna, a Spaniſh Guarda Coſta, which came out of that Harbour, came up with her, by rowing with 16 Oars, when ſhe fired ſeveral Shot at the Rebecca, and ordered her Boat to be hoiſted out and ſent on board of her, which accordingly was done, and in it, with ſome others, went the Mate, with her Clearance from Jamaica, expecting that would give ſufficient Satisfaction, it being a Time of profound Peace with Spain; but on the contrary, the People were detained by the Spaniards, who ſent her Boat back full of armed Men, who told Capt. Jenkins that they were come to viſit his Ship, for Money, Logwood, Hides, or Tallow, the Product of the Spaniſh Settlements in America. To which he anſwered, That the King of Spain's Officers were welcome, and might do their Duty, for that there was nothing on board but what was the Growth and Produce of Jamaica. By that Time their Number amounted to about 50 Men. They broke open all her Hatches, Lockers, and Cheſts, in which finding nothing to their Purpoſe, their Lieutenant ordered Capt. Jenkins's Hands to be tied, as alſo his Mates, and ſeized them to the Fore-Maſt, and then cut and violently beat a Mulatto Boy, (his Servant) to extort a Confeſſion of their being Money in the Ship, but he confeſſing nothing, they began with Capt. Jenkins, putting a Rope about his Neck, and another about the Boy's, which they faſtened to him, and hoiſted them up to the Fore-Yard; the Boy being light, ſlipt through the Nooſe, to the Captain's great Eaſe, and after keeping him hanging for a ſhort Space, they let him fall down amain on Deck, and asked him if he would not then confeſs where his Money was. But he ſtill told them he had none; on which he was hoiſted up a ſecond Time, and ſwiftly let down again, and being then asked the ſame Queſtion, he replied as before, adding, that they might torture him to Death, but he could not make any other Anſwer: They then threatned to burn the Ship, and him and his People in it, for that they were obſtinate Hereticks; but after giving him about half an Hour's Reſpite, while they conſulted together about him, he having the Rope all the while about his Neck, the Man who firſt put it on, told him he muſt go up again, ſearched his Pockets, took his Silver Buckles out of his Shoes, and then hoiſted him up, and kept him hanging until he was quite ſtrangled, and then let him fall down the Fore-Hatch upon the Casks, which bruiſed him very much; from thence he was dragged by the Neck upon Deck again, and there lay to Appearance dead for near a Quarter of an Hour: When he recovered, their Lieutenant with Piſtols and a Cutlaſs in his Hands, went to him, crying, Confeſs, Confeſs, or die: He told him he had no more Money than he had ſhewed him at firſt, being four Britiſh Guineas, one Piſtole, and four double Doubloons, which he commanded him to give him, and he did it accordingly: He had no ſooner done it, but he took hold of his Left Ear, and with his Cutlaſs ſlit it down, and then another of the Spaniards took hold of it and tore it off, but gave him the Piece of his Ear again, bidding him carry it to his Majeſty King George: Orders were then given for ſcalping of him, but finding his Head cloſe ſhaved, they forbore executing that Part of his Sentence. His Mate and Boatſwain were beat, but underwent no other Puniſhment: They ſtripped the whole Crew of their Cloaths, Beds, Bedding, &c. The Captain's own Loſs, of his Watch, Gold, Cloaths, Linen, &c. on a moderate Valuation, amounted to 112l. Sterling: And in order to deſtroy the Ship, they took away all his Inſtruments of Navigation, and all the Candles they had in the Ship, for Want of which in the Night-time they burned Oil and Butter in the Benacle to ſteer by. Their Sloop appeared to have been built in Bermuda, and had San Antonio wrote in her Stern. Their Commander they called Juan Franciſco, and their Lieutenant Dores; but theſe Names are ſuppoſed to be fictitious. Having done tormenting the unhappy Capt. Jenkins, after keeping his Ship the beſt Part of the Day, they diſmiſſed her, and the Captain bore away for the Havanna, hoping to find there ſome Britiſh Ships, from whom he might procure ſufficient Neceſſaries to enable him to proceed on his Voyage; but thoſe in the Sloop perceiving it, ſtood after her, and declared that if ſhe did not go immediately for the Gulph, they would ſet the Ship on Fire; and rather than have a ſecond Viſit from them, they recommended themſelves to God, and the Mercy of the Seas, and after very many great Hardſhips and Perils, they happily arrived in the River Thames on Friday laſt.

PARIS, June 20. The Gardener who wounded the Curate of Soiſſy on Trinity Sunday, as he was officiating in his Church, was tried the 15th before the Parliament, who confirmed the Sentence of the Chatelet, viz. to perform the Amande honorable before the Church of Notre Dame, to have an Hand cut off, and be burnt alive in the Place de Greve, which was executed the next Day.

Cadiz, June 5. N. S. As every Thing here seems to tend towards a Peace, and no Armament is talked of, we hope that the Difficulties this Commerce is under will not long subsist: On the contrary, the four Men of War for Azogues are loading with all Expedition, and will be ready to sail by the End of next Month. Were these People apprehensive of a Misunderstanding, we believe they would not send out these Ships. Those now abroad are hourly expected; and we hope their Arrival may enable the Court soon to issue out the Treasure.

Hague, June 22. N. S. Yesterday in the Afternoon, Monsieur de Val, Secretary to Mynheer Van Hoey, their High Mightinesses Ambassador in France, arrived here with an Express from Paris, with Advice that a Courier from Mr. Keene was gone through that Place on his Way to London, to carry the News that his Catholick Majesty signed the Act of Approbation of the Treaty of Vienna the 6th Instant.
